Crash of the Titans: Renunciation of a New Religion

by Gary Haden

If the paranormal community is a faith-based community, and I accept that that's arguable, it is in desperate need of a thorough-going reformation. Or counter-reformation.

Or maybe just rehab.

I originally thought "reformation" because the problem seems to be with a priestly class or caste in the community believing itself to be God. And so a Lutheran rebellion would seem to be in order.

At first glance, the priests in this case resemble the scholastic hamhands of Luther's time. But the scholasticism of David Jacobs and Budd Hopkins as regards hypnotic regression is fake. They aren't real priests. Their credentials are in other fields. They are asking to be justified by faith alone.

They are fundamentalistic lutheran inquisitors.

I mean, "UFOlogy" shouldn't be a faith-based community. But it walks like one and it quacks like one. And like good, old-fashioned, lard-cooked, bacon-and-egg Christian Fundamentalism, the faith is being forced down people's throats. You get a feeling that if you open your mouth to pose a question, some authoritarian figure like David Jacobs will poke a spoonful of castor oil in it to shut you up.

Is it surprising people are throwing up?

The UFO Community sickens me.

The kind of intellectual shutdown the UFOlogical Community is mired in is typical of this devolved age. The United States, the de facto home base of the UFOlogical or paranormal community, has been in intellectual shutdown, arguably, since September 11th, 2001, probably even earlier, with the priestly castes—the think tanks, the military high command, the cable news megaphones—assuming authoritarian control of the narrative and suppressing and at times destroying evidence that that narrative is false.

There is a revolt of the idiots going on. It is based on a kind of Lutheran justification by faith alone which allows any old funny feeling in my head to refute meticulous research. I don't have to show you my badge or my M.D. degree. I just pronounce you crazy and you are.

Hammerheaded American stupidity, which is in the leading suspect in locating the culprit responsible for any possible Global Extinction on the horizon, has infiltrated the community that calls itself UFOlogy and the priestly caste in the community hammers into conformity anyone who doesn't follow the talking points or they humiliate the infidels enough they never dare show their faces in town again.

The problem is, the intellectual rigor, which is supposed to characterize and justify a priest's status, is in dry-rot in the UFO Community. The Emma Woods Case establishes the existence of that dry-rot and demonstrates to the world that the UFO Community will consent to any damage wrought by any of their cherished priests upon infidels having the gall to question the inerrant core concepts of the faith.

One core concept is this: Millions of people, including perhaps you and me, are being abducted by goblins from another world.

The intellectual dry-rot is this: hypnotic regression, a memory retrieval tool that has been challenged in clinical and UFOlogical research and has produced at times monstrous results, is touted as the inerrant word of God by those who worship its performance-artist priests—David Jacobs and Budd Hopkins.

It is not surprising then that the ambience of the Emma Woods Case occasionally takes on the character of the witch hunt. But, as my catholic friends have pointed out, this is a protestant witch hunt, justified by faith alone.

David Jacobs, in recent weeks, has proven to be a pretty good Inquisitor. His concern is not for his scholarly acumen, the hoaxing of which established his priestly status in the Church of Alien Abduction. It is a hoax because he did not rise in the "community" as a historian. To be a priest in a fraudulent religion you have to have fraudulent credentials. Citing fake credentials, the fake priest justifies his priestly status on faith alone.

You don't have to do any work to achieve that status.

Now, I challenge the practice of hypnotic regression in even therapeutic settings. Even in the hands of trained professionals, as we saw in the horror tales emerging from the Satan Shrinks of Texas, it can be an extremely dangerous tool to use and its place in the therapeutic regimen is justly insecure. That does not excise hypnosis in general from the toolbox because if you want to lose weight or overcome anxiety or treat agoraphobia or if you want to modify behaviors you want to change, it can be a boon.

That's because it is a creative tool. It is not an excavation tool. That's the reason why some suspect that Jacobs's entire project has been a work of fiction and he's just generating material for his books.

But there are hypnotic regression practitioners who are beholden to licensing authorities and the ethical guidelines those authorities construct. They receive professional training before their licensure or certification and the best are also trained therapists.

David Jacobs, like his guru Budd Hopkins, is beholden to no licensing authority. He and Hopkins have no formal training. Like the inquisitors who burned heretics and infidels at the stake in years gone by, Priests who deemed themselves God, Hopkins and Jacobs honor no higher authority. In AA parlance, they have no higher power. They demand tribute. Like the Queen of Argos in the recent Clash of the Titans, they are the Gods now. They decide who can appear with them on podcasts and radio shows. They decide which of their detractors are insane, even though they are as much therapeutic frauds as they are hypnotic frauds.

As Kevin Randle intimated in his recent interview with Paul Kimball, people's lives degrade when they consult Abduction researchers.

That might be because their expertise lays in other fields. Their authority is asserted on the basis of faith. They are priests of a cult, as some in the coffee-drinking wing of the community have asserted.

Jacobs claims Emma Woods is crazy. This amounts to a denunciation claim pronounced by a high priest of the inquisition upon a purported witch. It isn't God the witch doesn't believe in. It is the Priest. The Priest is not God. (And in this case, the Priest is not a Priest.) The Priest conflates faith in him with faith in God. Jacobs and a good many of his devotees conflate faith in him with faith in Alien Abduction.

But based on his credentials, you have to take a leap of faith to believe in his work. What Jacobs did to Emma Woods was an insane act. He rightly senses there is insanity somewhere but since he can't bear the guilt from locating it within himself, he puts it in Emma's box.

And if Emma was struggling emotionally, he should have had the presence of mind to refer her out. He often states he had consent to plant the multiple personality disorder diagnosis in her mind. Hippocrates had a saying that is the simplest and most famous ethical principle the world has known. It has been adopted as a matter of course by hypnotherapists and clinical hypnotists, not to mention professional helpers of all kinds interested in the well-being of their clients.

To paraphrase it, it is this: First, do no harm. It is such a famous ethical principle that grade school kids know about it. No one bound by any ethical medical oath would contend that his patient gave him the right to do her harm. Emma Woods was not seeking physician assistance in a medical suicide.

Then you get the circular argument from Jacobs: Well, I've admitted I'm not a physician, I'm not a psychotherapist. In other words, I'm not bound by any oath nor am I beholden to ethical guidelines above the self-flattering dictates of my own superego.

We are the gods now.

To accept that explanation as convincing authority for the acts Jacobs committed is to fall on your knees before the inquisitor in an act of adoration. That is the obsequious status of the UFO Community. It is the genuflection of a dying religious community before a false god.

The UFOlogical Community has its Socrates, its Plato, its Marx, its Luther, and even its Nietzsche, but they are oases in a vast and waterless desert.

I can't fall prostrate before these gods. I leave the UFOlogical Community to perform that oblation. I renounce the Church of Alien Abduction. I'd nail 95 theses to David Jacobs's door but he's a fake priest with fake priestly credentials. I think the Twelve Steps of AA would be more appropriate.

Like most efforts in this field, however, the energy would be wasted.

Let me make it clear: If there is anyone in the Emma Woods Case who demonstrates mental illness I contend it is David Jacobs. If there is anyone resembling a borderline psychotic, it is David Jacobs.

If you don't understand what a complete and utter consignment to hell the diagnosis of multiple personality disorder is and what barbaric psychotropic remedies are prescribed, you're not going to understand the damage it does.

I understand the thinking behind the idea that Jacobs maybe didn't know what he was doing. But it was insane for a stupid person to implant a hypnotic suggestion that someone had multiple personality disorder.

It is downright evil for someone who understood the consequences to do it. Malicious and psychotic.

Maybe it doesn't trouble the faithful that Jacobs contends Emma Woods is crazy after having made every effort to insure that she was with his hamhanded attempt to scramble her eggs, but it disgusts me.

So please. Don't hit me with she was mentally ill and Mr. Wonderful Doctor Jacobs should have referred her out when the idiot attempted to blow apart her mind.

Because he was running from goblins. Let me tell you what you can do with your goblins, paranormal community.

Another great post, Gary! Your writing is the kind that should be widely circulated within the unfortunately insular field of ufology/abductionology; not the druck that's out there now.

Ditto on Jacobs being the one who's mentally ill. I suspected that up early on after listening to the Emma Woods tapes and reading his ever-changing vicious rebuttal.

And Budd Hopkins is no better, excusing and defending Jacobs while attacking Emma Woods. I've heard/tell that Hopkins autobiography has some untruths about himself. If that's the case, they're both liars that cover each other's asses.

About the pretentiousness of Jacobs using his "doctor" title. I have a cousin who earned a Ph.D. in Chemistry. There is no way he would ever call himself or even sign a paper with the title "Dr.". If it's necessary, he'll put his Ph.D. at
